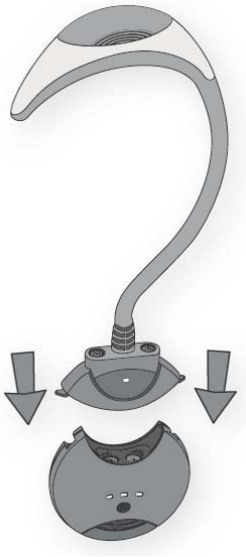
What is n*EAR*com about?

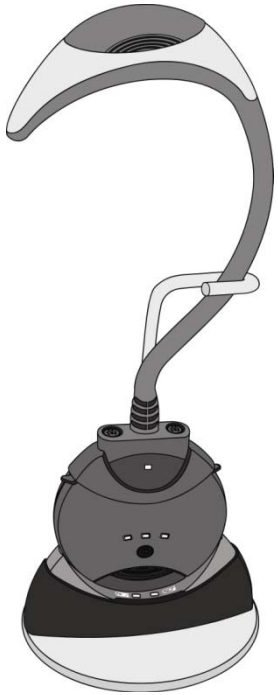
- Enables wireless programming
- Eliminates programming cables and adaptors for those instruments that communicate via Bluetooth technology
- Attaches to NOAHlink replacing the neckstrap for true wireless programming
- More comfortable for the client
- Replaces the NOAHlink neck strap



nEARcom
Supported by leaders in the industry

Wireless programming

Provide wireless fitting comfort to your patients.



nEARcom
Supported by leaders in the industry

How does n*EAR*com work?

- Snaps on to NOAHlink for true wireless programming
- Uses well-known and proven technology
  - NOAHlink for reliable programming
  - Existing Bluetooth interface to PC

- For instruments requiring wired programming:
  - Just connect the usual programming cables to the pass-through connections!

nEARcom
Supported by leaders in the industry

n*EAR*com - a new standard

- A consortium of several hearing instrument manufacturers are bringing this new technology to the market
- Currently, Widex, Starkey, Oticon and Bernafon have joined to support n*EAR*com
- Designed to handle future improvements and developments of the wireless interface.

nEARcom
Supported by leaders in the industry

n*EAR*com - FAQ

Which instruments are supported by n*EAR*com?

- Wireless programming through nEARcom is possible only with nEARcom-enabled products, as defined by each manufacturer.
- Other products can be connected using cables

When will n*EAR*com and/or tech modules be available?

- Varies by manufacturer. Widex not expected until 2010.

How do I get n*EAR*com and the appropriate Tech Module?

- From your local hearing instrument supplier

nEARcom
Supported by leaders in the industry